

ALLIANCE FOR jobs and clean energy

The Alliance for Jobs and Clean Energy is Washington State's coalition of community organizations, business, labor, and environmental groups dedicated to reducing global warming pollution, creating family-wage jobs, and securing a better future for our families.

Clean energy that we produce here at home helps us build stronger local economies and create good jobs in our communities. We have the know-how and the workforce to transition Washington from the pollution of fossil fuels to the prosperity of a just and sustainable clean energy economy. We are already paying the price of global warming: threats to our regional shellfish and timber industries; disproportionate health impacts on working people and communities of color; and threats to coastal communities and fire-prone rural towns.

We are boldly pursuing efforts to hold polluters accountable — accounting for the price of carbon pollution to reflect its true costs, and reinvesting in our Washington economy and communities. We are launching a Washington-based approach as part of a broader West Coast partnership that recognizes our critical role in addressing not just the local and regional impacts, but the global importance of curbing carbon pollution.

THE ALLIANCE NEEDS YOUR HELP

JOIN > Join the Alliance by adding your name or organization to our growing, statewide list of allies and volunteers.

SHARE > Spread the word through social media, communicating with your legislators, and taking local action to build support in your community.

DONATE > Donate to our grassroots effort to hold polluters accountable and set the record straight: most of us do our part – it's time for big, profitable polluters to step up and take responsibility!
